Quay Is Rattled.

What is more he (Hopkins) is the choice of this district for Congress.—Republican Advocate.

This is a hare-faced lie. The editor knew it was a lie when he wrote it and knew that he was said for lying. He is aware that Niles was the choice of Tioga county. The statement of the conferees printed in another column substantiates this statement.

Democrats, be sure your name is registered.

Republican candidate means that the voter believes him and his master to be honest public officers, or that, although they may be rascals, they are no worse than Democrats. * * * Republican success in Pennsylvania would be a deliberate approval of Quay, either as a public officer or as a citizen declaring the most damaging accusations responsible people by a great body of his most respectable and trusted fellow partisans, and ought to hasten the downfall of a party which accepts such leadership.

The question of the validity of the new beer law having been raised by the New York importers, and such able lawyers as Senators Carlisle and McPherson having expressed the opinion that the provision of the paragraph relating to the stamping on tobacco from the copy of the bill signed by Mr. Harrison, made the entire law void, it has greatly disturbed the [illegible] Mr. Harrison was [illegible] to have corrected [illegible] by [illegible] Congress, but [illegible] to have [illegible] Congress [illegible] the bill [illegible] the House [illegible] the Senate [illegible] Congress [illegible] the bench would take [illegible] a technical [illegible] the bill [illegible] Democratic [illegible] his effort to [illegible]

Dustin Brown's Way.

About four miles or so
An' drives a spankin' team o' bays
W'en he goes to an' fro,
An' allus w'en he overhauls
Some feller walkin' on the ground,
He stops his team and cranps around,
An' calls
"Hullo,
Climb in an' hev a lift!"

Yep it sure 'im all an' show his spit
An' saw upon the floes,
His jolly face so red with pride
It rosy'er grows an shines.
Then to ses steps so gay and high
An' tear acrost at such a gait
You'd ses nary a track their owner was
An cry
"Hullo,
Climb in an' hev a lift!"

Brown a staggin down
An' w'en he reach the feet,
You bet he was a swell,
Drivin' his own horses stop
An yell
"Hullo,
Climb in an' hev a lift!"

They's folks who ride in all their pride
In Fortune's rig on life's highway,
Us folks who trudge along afoot
Ken see'm drive past every day.
They hain't like Dustin Brown at all;
It makes no odds how tired ye git
You'll never see them offer ye
"Hullo,
Climb in an' hev a lift!"

An Interesting Story of a Fireman's Heroism.

He had a terrible fire under his charge, but he stuck to his post and saved the building.

HUNTING BEARS IN MONTANA.

It Is Not So Pleasant When the Bear Turns the Tables.

It is not generally known that part of Hugh McQuaid's mission to the Flathead country was a search for the Lost Cabin Mine. The fact that he had drunk with five consecutive nights that the mine was situated in such and such a place together with a hearty invitation from his old friend, Maj. Pete, induced the colonel to spend five days in the saddle roaming about the Flathead country. The charming scenery and genial companionship of his friend caused him to forget the mine, and he is now kicking himself because he has also forgotten the location of the mine. It is with such ease that fortunes sometimes slip away. The major also had visions of fabulous wealth. Some time ago he found what appeared to be a rich strike, though he was by no means certain of the value. For the purpose of garnering reliable information he sent an invitation to a well known mining expert, Henry Brent, to meet him at the agency.

Brent, who likes an outing as well as any one, packed up a few traps and [illegible] Drummond, where he was joined by [illegible] and commenced the [illegible] journey. A beautiful red Irish setter, evidently the property of a lover of dogs. The dog wore a handsome collar and appeared to be a well-bred and valuable animal. He followed along behind the two travelers, to whom he seemed greatly attached. The [illegible] was [illegible] and [illegible] of a most unexpected adventure.
